CINCINNATI, April 22.-President Harrison sent a letter of regret to the convention of re-publican clubs, in which he said:

publican clubs, in which he said:

I regret that I shall be unable either to attend the convention or to give by letter any etcended younsel. The conventions of the republican party and the legislation of the last congress have, however, very clearly defined and very courageously presented the issues upon which the next contest must be waged. To those convention declarations I give the asseut of deep conviction, and to the important legislation of the last congress my earnest support. If the people of the United States will now give the world to understand that the protection and enlargement of our domestic industries, the extension of our foreign trade by a reciprocal arrangement not inconsistent with the protective policy, and the revival of our merchant marine by methods that all other nations use, is our settled policy, we will speedily, I am sure, settled policy, we will speedily, I am su ze marvelous development and renewed preor from the extortionate demands of public carriers.

Recent events have made more apparent than ever the necessity for exercising the sovereign right inherent in our nation, as in all others, to use discrimination in the admission of foreigners as residents in this country. We, therefore, recommend such changes in our laws as will effectually prohibit the immigration of paupers and criminals, and of people so alien from us in their ideas and habits of thought that they cannot be assimilated in the body politic.

We reaffirm our belief in, and our devotion to, the supreme and sovereign right of every lawful citizen, rich or poor, native or foreign-born, white or black, to cast one free ballot in public elections and to have that ballot duly counted, and certified as counted. The denial of such rights should result in a decrease of representation in congress and in the electoral college.

T. C. Campbell, of New York, made the point that it was better to be right and lose than to win by being wrong.

The debate grew hot. The Mafia was denounced. One delegate asked where the line could be drawn to define who was not fit to assimilate with the body politic.

Another retorted that in New Orleans the line was drawn on the lamp post.

Finally Judge Webster moved to strike out all after the word "criminal," and this was done, and the resolutions adopted.

The reading of the Harrison endorsement created the most enthusiastic scene of the convention. The delegates rose and with waving handkerchiefs, hats and canes kept up the demonstration for several minutes.

Phineas Lousberry, of Connecticut, was reelected treasurer. The committee reported in favor of Indianapolis as the next place of meeting, but the convention made the report to suit itself by noting that the executive committee shall name the place and time, but shall make the time not less than three weeks after the national republican convention.

Then at nearly 4 o'clock the convention adjourned sine die.

And Greenville Is Inundated with Misalssippi Water.

Greenville, Miss., April 22.—[Special.]—

About 3 o'clock this morning, the main levee, about four blocks from the central business portion of Greenville, caved in, making a gap of about 100 feet at a place where the water was about two and one-half feet deep, which let in the water against the new protection levee, which was in the course of construction as a protection, but was unfinished, as the unexpected always happens.

A force of 250 men were put to work with sacks of earth, plank and filling, and by 11 o'clock the gap was entirely closed, and the water which had gained ingress into the city, was falling as rapidly as it rose, and tonight the streets are free from any water whatever, the drainage being ample to carry off the surplus water.

place at once about $1,000,000 of subsidiary national bank depositories generally acquiesce

> FERRETTING OUT AN ALABAMA CRIME. Bibb County Visited by Detectives Who Are Working for Clews to the Murder of Sheriff Jones.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 22.-[Special.]-News reached here today of another in the late Bibb county tragedy. There is great excitement in that county over the assassination of Sheriff R. Jones, of Louina, and the subsequent arrest of W. R. Trott, who lives near Six Mile, on a warrant charging him with the murder. Your correspondent, this morning, met a drummer, who is just from Centerville, Bibb county. He says that Trott is now in jail, and there is little if any doubt of his guilt. There are two witnesses to terrible tragedy, but they are overawed and are afraid to testify in the case. The excitement throughout the county has been intensified by the finding of the remains of James Tate in a cave, the man who is charged with killing Bud Head, and who was in the custody of Sheriff Jones when the latter was shot. The handcuffs were on the hands of the deceased when found. It is now said that the sheriff was killed by the friends of Bud Head, who wanted to kill Tate. It is understood here that Governor Jones has been very active in his efforts in assisting the local authorities to ferret out the perpetrators of the foul crime and bring them to justice.

When asked by your correspondent concerning the reports from Bibb, Governor Jones replied: "I refuse to be interviewed on that subject.

Interest in the case has not for one moment lagged, and the courtroom at each session is overcrowded long before order is called.

A transaction last night and subsequent events connected with it have been the cause of considerable comment in commercial circles here today. It appears that Mr. L. A few hours after this took place Mr. Endel was surprised to receive a visit from Mr. Rosenthal, who requested him to cancel the trade and return the checks, giving as his reason that he did not care to go into business again. This Mr. Endel declined to do, whereupon Mr. Rosenthal insisted that the trade be declared off, and, Mr. Endel further declining, notified him that he would stop the payment of his checks. When the bank opened this morning Mr. Endel presented the checks. Payment was refused. The case is now in the hands of the attorneys, and the public, with considerable curiosity, is awaiting the course of events. RICHMOND'S TREASURY ROBBED.

A PRIVATE IN THE WAR.

ADVENTURES OF AN OLD SOLDIEL

The March from Atlanta to Jonesboro and the Fighting There—The Bloody Bat-

DAHLONEGA, Ga., April 22.-[Special.]-The reminiscences of a private in the late war are always interesting, and the series of war articles furnished to The Signal by Mr. Virge Moose, are attracting general attention. After some sharp fighting around Atlanta his com-mand was ordered to Jonesboro. He says: "When we heard firing in the direction of oro we went that way as fast as pos Jonesboro we went that way as fast as possible, and late that evening, when we got there, our men had again charged their works and had been repulsed by superior numbers. The major of the Forty-first Georgia regiment, and will Sutton, of my company, were wounded, and a great many others wounded and killed in our regiment. The next news was that Atlanta had fallen. We then had about three weeks' rest, during which time our president, Davis, paid us a short visit and made a speech—the only time I ever saw him. He addressed each regiment separately. The march to Nashville had begun with Hood's armly. We had been promised nothing to eat but meal. The meat was to be gotten the best way we knew how. There not being any, we had to do without.

way we knew how. There not being any, we had to do without.

I remember when the First Georgia turned back at the Alabama line how they cheered, and of our cheering in return, not because we were sorry to lose them, but because they were glad. We were nearing Florence, Ala., where the enemy was reported in force. That place, as well as I remember, was 110 miles south of Nashville. We had marched hundreds of miles from Georgia, nearly deprived of clothes and with nothing scarcely to live on. I remember we were in front, and as we got in sight of Florence, across the river, our battery threw a shell over there, and we saw the enemy leaving. We crossed the river on pontoons and took possession of the town. A great many of our boys were royally entertained by the citizens of that place, yet we presented a very shabby appearance, for we had not changed clothing for months. I was barefooted, and my left trouser leg was worn off about a foot and the other about six inches. But I did not feel at all embarrassed while eating in a nice dining room, waited on by a rebel lady.

We were nearing Franklin, Tenn., having marched over thirty miles that day, and hearing fighting, we formed a line of battle and about twenty-five lines of battle and stormed them. The first lines were taken before sundown. The second about dark, and the third was fought over until after midnight.

We were nearing Franklin, Tenn., having marched over thirty miles that day, and hearing fighting, we formed a line of battle and moved forward into the hardest-fought battle that was ever fought on this continent, or any other, for that matter. The enemy had three lines of works about 100 yards apart, and General Hood marched his three army corps in about twenty-five lines of battle and stormed them. The first lines were taken hefore sun-

I shall not attempt to describe this battle, for I can't do it. It has been near twenty-seven years since it was fought, and I can still hear, in my imagination, the yells, oaths and the prayers of the wounded and dying, as we fought hand to hand over the third line of breastworks for four hours. Oh! it was terrible. General Pat Cleburn was lifted over their works on their bayonets; our dead in their works on their bayonets; our dead in several places were six deep and literally covered the ground for acres. The enemy's loss was very near as great; their breastworks were full of dead and wounded. Our men made their wounded throw ammunition over to us when we got without. munition over to us when we got without. After they commenced retreating after midnight one Tennessee captain in the battle, whose family he had not seen for over three years, was living in Franklin not 100 yards from where he had been fighting for six hours or longer, and when the enemy commenced retreating from their last line he yelled to his company to forward to wife and children. On his own door-step he fell, his body riddled with bullets. I saw his wife and daughters next morning and heard their heart-rending cries over his dead body. In this very battle there was brother against brother, and father against son.

They secured hoes and spades and gradually around the obstruction, which proved to be of burned clay, about six feet long, and made in the exact shape of a coffin. It was about two feet in the ground, and over the top about two feet in the ground, and over the top mussel shells were laid as a covering. They endeavored to take the coffin up whole, but the blow of the plow had shattered it so that it fell in pieces. Mr. Hall says that the coffin was filled with ashes and half-charred coals, and a few human bones were also found, among them being a part of the shoulder blade and ankle, showing that the body had been placed in the coffin and cremated, the heat from the fagots baking the clay. In it were also ocean shells. ne clay. In it were also ocean shells, ing that the tribe which buried the coffin must have made occasional trips to the coast.

Around the edges of the coffin was a roughly executed scroll work, showing that the work was done by some one having an idea, at least, of art and ornamentation. The pieces which Mr. Hall brought to Greensboro were viewed with great interest.

The place where this coffin was found seems to have been a burial place for the aborigines. Frequently human bones, pots, tomahawks, etc., are plowed up. Some time ago a pot was plowed up containing a yellowish substance resembling sulphur. It was very soft, and could be worked like dough, but being exposed to the atmosphere quickly became hardened.

Miles struck Whittaker a terrible blow on the left eye, and that member was badly blackened and swollen.

Whittaker cut Miles with a pocket knife very severely in four places. Miles bled like a butchered ox. He was cut along the left side of the face from the roots of the hair, down the cheek, across the mouth and to the botton of the chin. A second cut was across the throat, and Miles's necktie was cut almost in two. He also received two long rakes from the knife in two different places on the left arm. Miles's coat was hacked to pieces.

Had Whittaker's knife been a little larger, Miles's wounds would doubtiess have proved fatal. He is now at home in bed suffering a great deal from his wounds. Whittaker was arrested. The grand jury found a true bill against him today for assault with intent to murder, and he is now in jail.

It happened several days ago and the family tried to keep it quiet, but your correspondent called on Mrs. Palmer, who related all she knew of on Mrs. Palmer, who related all she knew or the matter. She said several days ago she was feeling unwell and asked her son, a young man eighteen years old to make her a toddy, hoping it would strengthen her and make her feel better. A PATHETIC STORY.

WANDERINGS OF AN INSANE CON-FEDERATE SOLDIER IN TEXAS.

Driven Insane by Injuries Received in the War—He Was a Member of the Fifty-First Georgia Infantry.

ROME, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—A special to The Tribune from McPherson, Kas., tells a pathetic story, which will awaken general interest. But the story is given more in detail in the following letter from McPherson to the prosecuting attorney in this city. The letter

Says:
Some time in last September we found, wandering in our county, an insane man aged about forty-five years, who gave his name as Henry Dunn, but nothing further could be learned from him.

He was sent to the county poorhouse, as he was entirely destitute when found. Since then he became so violent that it became necessary to have him adjudged insane, and application has been made for his admission to the state insane asylum. Today, after a great deal of questioning, I was able to draw from him the following statements: His father's name was Leman Dunn and his mother's Susan Dunn, and his brother's was Jacob W. Dunn. The home of the Dunn family was at Rome, Ga, until the breaking out of the war, since which time he has heard nothing from any of his relatives.

He enlisted in the Fifty-First Georgia Infantry, Company A., served eighteen months, when he was taken prisoner at or near Gettysburg. He emained twelve months in the military prison at Camp Lookout, near Washington, was then sent to Texas, after which time be recollects nothing, He says his father was considered weathy, for he owned a plantation near Rome, one at a place called Cotton Hill, and another near the cen Stewart county, and also that there were ten children in the family.

"Rome, Georgia," have been about the only two words he has uttered since we found him intil very recently.

If you can learn anything of this Dunn family, should be very glad to receive the information

CHARLES W. WEBSTER. Said Mr. Nunnally, as he handed the letter to a Tribune reporter, "I don't know where one could find a simpler or more touching story than this letter tells. Just read this sen tence, 'since that time he recollects nothing, and that other sentence, "Rome-Georgia" are the only two words he speaks.' Did you ever read anything more pathetic? Bereft of reason by injuries received on the field of glory, that man only recollects his home. Nothing can make its name indellible, and the people of Georgia are too noble to allow another Geor gian to live the balance of his life in the insance asylum of another state. If he is to seek such a retreat, bring him to Georgia and keep him

HEIRS TO A BIG FORTUNE.

The Drakes Can Set Up Opposition to Jay

LEXINGTON, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—The own, original descendant of Sir Francis Drake, who left the fabulous amount of $196,000,000 to his followers, besides five large estates in old England, has at last been located in Ogle thorpe county, Georgia, being no less that Mr. Eugene M. Drake, a prosperous and progress ive farmer in the eastern portion of the county. In a short chat with Mr. John J. Daniel, who married a sister of Mr. Drake, we learn that an investigation has been going on for the last eight years, and during that time the proper papers have been signed and everything in readiness. Mr. Eugene Drake is the oldest son of J. V. Drake, and grandson of Archibald Drake, who were in direct line to Sir Francis, and of course he will be a "baron." He has a brother, Frank Drake, wh was named Sir Francis, in reality, who will subtless share with him in this immense fortune. Besides Mrs. J. J. Daniel, a sister who, though dead, left a number of children and Mr. Daniel, of whom we spoke, also Mrs

Dr. Armstrong, of Union Point, Ga. The half-brothers are, Seaborn Drake; Ben Drake, Tucker Drake; half-sisters, Miss Belle Drake, Miss Leila Drake, Miss Jennie Drake, besides a large connection of the name. Mr. Daniel would not talk but very little about it for publication, but said that the reason that the estate had not been decided was because an imbecile of the family in England was still living, but who just recently died. Mr. Eugene Drake is about thirty-eight years old, very modest and retiring, and he has the well wishes of this entire people in his big fortune

A SNAKE IN THE BOAT.

Thrilling Adventure of Two Boys While Fishing in the Oconee Biver.

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—
While Joe Brown and Ben F. Wammock were setting out hooks in the Oconee river, they ran their boat up under some willow trees to tie on some hooks to the limbs, and a moccasin that had crawled out on the limbs to sun himself, fell in the boat between the boys. Ben leaped from the boat and climbed the willow tree, and when the snake came too near him he would reach down and kick the hose and Fishing in the Oconee River. run him back toward Joe. He struck at him with the paddle and missed him and he ran up under the seat. Joe sat there with both legs up, looking back into the deep water, and had just about made up his mind to fall back in the water. Ben, seeing his condition, came down the tree into the boat to aid him; but it seems the moccasin had the advantage of the boys and used it. As soon as Ben landed in the boat he made for him and chased him up the tree again. Ben him and chased him up the tree again. Ben says he kicked the boat and shouted so loud says he kicked the boat and should so loud the moccasin ran back to see Joe hunt the bot-tom of the Oconee. Joe had by this time gained presence of mind to know he had a good paddle in his hand, and came down and killed the biggest moccasin in the Oconee

A WHITE MAN'S BLACKNESS. He Is Said to Have Hired a Negro to Burn

Macon, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—A few weeks ago a white man came to Macon and opened a small store on Fourth street, in a wooden building. He insured his stock for $300 with the agency of Cobb, Cabaniss & Cobb. The following particulars have been related to The Constitution:

Tuesday night about 12:30, while Officer Bill Jones was walking his beat, he passed the store of the merchant. A negro man, who was standing in front of the store, stopped the officer and said: "Mr. Jones, the proprietor of this store engaged me for $125 to burn down his store tonight so he could get the insurance. He gave me the keys of his store so I could enter and set fire to the kerosene, which is in the store in the can, but I haven't the nerve to do the deed, and when I saw you I just concluded I would tell you all about it."

The negro then gave the keys to Officer Jones, and they entered it together, and the kerosene was found as described. On the counter was a piece of paper on which the merchant had figured in regard to the insurance and the amount he was to pay the negro. The solicitor general has been notified of the occurrence, and Cobb, Cabaniss & Cobb have also been told, so they can cancel their insurance policy.

WHAT THE COURTS ARE DOING.

Several Matters Disposed of by Judge Miller—A Big Case.

Macon, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—Manager E. E. Winters, of the Macon street railway, has been appointed receiver, and required to give a bond of $5,000. A sale of this property may be effected at an early date. On Sunday the railroad hauled 5,003 passengers, and had the accommodation been better, a much larger crowd would have been transported.

Judge Miller has nullified the order in regard to the temporary receiver for the Macon china store. He allows Mr. Tom White, Jr., to act under Temporary Receiver Burney, and permits the business to be contanued, and allows Mr. White to sell the goods for cash or on credit, and to keep account of all sales. Mr. White says he expects to have the affairs of the Macon china store straightened out in a short while.

wick, as First Intended.

Macon, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—All the talk about the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias not meeting at Brunswick, because the railroads wouldn't give the usual reduced rates, comes to naught. Grand Chancellor T. J. Calling went to Atlanta yesterday, to see if reduced railroad rates couldn't be obtained for the knights in attendance on the Brunswick meeting. He has returned from Atlanta, and informs THE CONSTITUTION that a 1-cent rate meeting. He has returned from Atlanta, and informs THE CONSTITUTION that a 1-cent rate has been granted the knights, and, therefore, the grand lodge will meet at Brunswick.

A Serious Runaway.

[Spacial.]—Today

MACON, Ga., April' 22.—[Special.]—Today while Mr. Robert J. Taylor, treasurer and manager of the Southern Phosphate works, was riding in a buggy with a lad named Logan, one of the wheels came off. The horse took fright and dashed against the fence of the front yard of Mr. T. D. Tinsley on College street, and fell over the fence into the yard. The animal was hurt so badly that it will probably die. The buggy was smashed to pieces. Mr. Taylor and Logan were thrown out of the buggy. Mr. Taylor was not hurt, but the lad had his left shoulder dislocated.

A MODEL FARMER.

He Works on the Intensive Plan and Out-strips His Brother Farmers.

EASTMAN, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—Last year Mr. John H. Hargrove excelled the second best farmer in this county in the number of bales per acre on his entire cotton crop. And this year he proposes to reduce his number of acres to less than half of what it was last year, so that he alone, in person, can cultivate it, and still obtain a like yield of cotton. He expects to apply seventy-five bushels of cotton seed and 300 pounds of guano in the drill per acre at planting, and in July feed 300 pounds more of guano to the growing plants. Ms. Hargrove's lands are already in a high state of cultivation, and, with good seasons and the excellent tillage he will give it, we may look for fine results.

A CURIOUS JAIL DELIVERY.

No Clue to His Whereabouts.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—
A curious jail delivery occurred here last right. Crawford Vassar, an unbearable character, who was convicted of theft at the last term of the superior court, and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, was given his freedom and the mystery surrounding the case is, in fact, that there is no clue whatever obtainable of his escape. The doors were locked this morning, just as they were last night, and the only difference in the existence of affairs there this morning was the absence of Vassar. He left a note to Jailer Dunn, that three white men had come for him, and he thought best for him to go. The supposition is that a false key was used to open the door. Vassar was a sharper of modern improvement, and the people here will be contented if he only does not come back again. Crawford Vassar Takes His Departure.

A Dividend Declared.

GRIFFIN, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—The stockholders of the Kincaid Manufacturing Company held their third annual meeting at the company's office at 10 o'clock yesterday. The meeting confirmed the action of the directors in declaring a 6 per cent dividend, which is considered good for a two-year-old mill. It was decided to issue $30,000 worth of preferred bonds to increase the machinery in the mill.

The girl who wore a pretty and very stylish cutaway coat sniffed the air at this sweeping remark against silk jackets, and stuck the numb of her right hand in her vest.

"I like something light and airy for these ccasions," she said. "These silk jackets are the greatest boon to us women. I've half s dozen of them, and the silk washes beautifully and costs only 85 cents a yard. Then I've lots of swagger Marseilles vests to go with them, and some darling little dotted Swiss shirts. I bought the stuff for them at 25 cents a yard, and made them myself. Jack gave me a dozen swell ties he'd ordered for himself. Wasn't he a dear?"

Truth was, he hadn't thought of the gown.

"Yes," a little absently. His first wife, he remembered, had worn a gray alpaca to a pic nic, and it was so pretty, he thinks.

They are only $1.50 a yard, and very wide. I bought a gray and tan one for the present, and I'm sure they'll not be out of fashion by autumn. I'm going to buy up a lot of that exquisite gold and jeweled passementerie to trim black silks and grenadines, becau se it's cheap now. Do you like pansies?"

Here again came up a sudden pain in his heart. A faded flower in a book of poems, and a woman's blue eyes above.

Foraker's Bugle Horn.

There was reason to believe awhile ago that J. B. Foraker, of Ohio, in taking the field against John Sherman as a candidate for the senate, proposed to tack his fortunes to those of the Harrison administration. It was a very reasonable belief, and was based on the idea that Foraker was something of a politician. Those, however, who gave him credit for tact and common sense must surely have forgotten his connection with the ballot-box forgery case, a performance that smashed the republican party in Ohio for the time being, and compelled a repub lican investigating committee to pass resolu tions censuring him for the part he bore in the transaction. Since Halstead became an exile, Foraker has sadly needed an engineer to keep him on the track, and to see that the switches and sidings are in a safe con-

At the republican league convention in session in Cincinnati, Foraker made his appearance, and, as was to be expected, created decided sensation by exalting Brother Blaine at the expense of Mr. Harrison. The question is, Was Foraker's speech a cut-anddried affair, or was it inspired by the occasion? He is said to be a very impulsive person, and it sometimes happens that impulsiveness succeeds in scoring a very brilliant stroke. It is certain that when Foraker eulogized Blaine at the expense of Harrison he fired the enthusiasm of his audience. The response was spontaneous and overwhelm Blaine was ranked with Lincoln and Grant, and given all the credit for whatever success the Harrison administration has attained.

It is no wonder the few friends of Harrison in the convention were puckered, nor is it any wonder that the friends of Foraker and Blaine attempted to smoothe matters over by giving out the impression that the orator did not intend to refer to Blaine as the ruling spirit of the administration. The fact should not be lost sight of, however, that the clamorous approval of Foraker's remarks by the convention is even more significant than the remarks themselves, and i is this fact that is likely to give Mr. Harrison food for serious reflection.

The convention addressed bp Foraker is a thoroughly representative body of republicans, and the enthusiastic attitude of these men towards Blaine shows that he is still may control his secretary of state, but he cannot control Blaine's friends.

Plain Facts About Silver.

The remonetization of silver depends en tirely upon the action of the United States. It is only necessary to make the world understand that it is the settled policy of this country to establish and maintain the double standard of gold and silver.

Let us look into the matter a little. Fo nearly seventy years England has been fight ing silver. She demonetized it early in the present century, but silver was not affected in the world at large. Then Germany followed with similar legislation, and still silver held its own.

This is significant. But mark the next step in the history of this business. In 1873 the United States demonetized silver in an indirect manner, and then Germany enacted her single gold standard.

So it will be seen that both England and Germany were powerless without the active aid of America. The question has been asked whether this country by remonetizing silver can bring the market value of th commodity up to 129 cents an ounce and keep it there without buying all the surplus silver that other nations may wish to get rid of.

We need not alarm ourselves about the surplus silver of the rest of the world. North and South America produce ninetenths of the world's silver, and if they decide in favor of the double standard there is no danger that the outside nations will be able to spare enough silver to flood us with it. Silver demonetized is, of course, merely a merchandise, fluctuating in value. When it is made a full legal tender circulating medium it has a fixed value. At the last ses sion of congress, when the house passed the free colnage bill, silver at once jumped to 121 cents per ounce, and its advance to 129 cents was only checked by the failure of remonetization in the senate. There can be no reasonable doubt that, if we had revived the double standard, the commodity of silver would have reached the fixed price of 129 cents per ounce and remained at that rate. Foreigners have no surplus silver to ship over here. They need it at home, and will need still more when we give it its proper place in the monetary world.

Why should England and Germany, with their small output of silver, and their combined population not much larger than ours, have the power to force the single gold standard upon the world? Past experience shows that when the test is made they are not able to do it. cted that all this ac

During the seventy years of our double tandard we were financially at our best and we have been encountering new evils ever since we departed from it. The attempt to outlaw silver after it had been for many centuries the equal of gold all the world over as a circulating medium was in the nature of a financial freak or scheme Certainly there is nothing in history, and nothing in recognized economic principles to justify it.

An Example to Be Followed. Last Sunday Dr. Talmage astounded his ongregation by making his appearance in the pulpit without his side whiskers. After the first shock of surprise the general verdict was favorable, and the New York papers say that the doctor's resemplance to Henry Clay was noted by all. The success attending this bold reform naturally leads alert and speculative minds to look about for other prominent side whiskers that could be spared with benefit to their owners. Perhaps the most blooming subject in this line is Colonel Whiskers Jones, of The St. Louis Republic. The colonel needs reform and rehabilitation, and he should by all means see what his barber can do for

If the loss of side whiskers makes Dr. Talmage look like Henry Clay, perhaps a clean shave would make Colonel Jones look like a democratic journalist. Let the experiment be tried.

Mexican Methods. Compulsory education is undoubtedly naking progress in this country. In quite a number of states parents compelled to send their children to school, or submit to a fine or imprisonment.

Some people regard this as progress if this view is correct, Mexico deserves high praise. In that country all children over five years of age must go to school, and parents failing to do their duty in this respect are fined $50 for each offense.

So it seems that this method suits our Mexican neighbors, where force has always been the main factor in government and in politics. We seem to be drifting that way. Only a few months ago the dominant party attempted to place a bayonet behind every ballot. Then our internal revenue laws are enforced in a very warlike fashion. Our frequent riots and strikes in various localities, requiring the armed interference of soldiers and Pinkerton men, show a Mexicanized state of affairs.

But this sort of progress is not pleasant to contemplate. The best government is the one that gets along with the least force, violence or compulsion. Tried by this standard, it must be admitted that we are going in the wrong direction. Mexican methods are not likely to benefit us. The American people need an American system for their best and highest development.

Political Prophecy.

Editor Henry Watterson, with a restless ness that is pleasantly prolific of results, has undertaken to make some political prophe cies, and his vision is thoroughly unpartisan since it embraces the future of both parties The functions of a political prophet are not less difficult than delicate, and by their very nature they are peculiarly open to criticism of the coarser kind, and especially inviting to the humor which is born and which dies within the limits of a paragraph. Yet, when criticism and flippancy have exhausted themselves, there will still remain, in Mr. Wat terson's predictions, the something that attracts attention. It is his gift to be interesting. Though we may be ever so dubious as to the matter, we cannot resist the man-

In the present instance, there is little fault to be found with the matter. All that can be said is that while it fits the present situation, the problem of the future is one of extreme difficulty. Political events are kaleidoscopic in their character. As in that scientific toy, the slightest turn or jar precipitates changes which are wholly unexpected, and for which the mind has made no preparation. Mr. Watterson says that Mr. Harrison will be renominated by the republicans, and this certainly seems to be the promise of the present. Small and narrow as he is in his sectional views, events have shown that the president possesses an individuality powerful enough to subdue even Mr. Blaine, to say nothing of the smaller politicians who dance attendance on the administration. At this moment Mr Harrison has no rival in the republican party who could stand against him in a nomnating convention. Mr. Blaine has aided him to clip the too ambitious wings of Reed and McKinley, and there seems to be no ob stacle in his way. Nevertheless, something unforeseen may occur to disarrange the Harrison-Blaine programme.

Mr. Watterson's prophetic eye beholds in the democratic situation something more of mixture and mystery. He says that Mr Cleveland may not be the next democrati candidate, but he is sure that Governor Hill cannot get the nomination. This prediction, coming from an old stager, who is not without his prejudices, and who carries about with him a heaving bosomful of warm convictions, is interesting. It embodies a suggestion to the effect that, if Mr. Cleveland fails to receive the nomination, it will be due to the machinations of Hill and his friends. This strips the statement of impartiality, which is an essential element of prophecy. If the democrats of New York should send delegates pledged to Mr. Cleve land, we should never hear it said that the Cleveland politicians had combined to defeat Hill. It will be equally idle and foolish to protest should the New York democrats select Hill delegates. The situation, so far as Cleveland and Hill are concerned, is far more complicated than a mere contest in New York state could make it, and it seems to us that these possible and probable complications are not pro vided for in Mr. Watterson's prophecy. In the southern states, or in the majority of them, the democratic party is controlled by the elements that make up the Farmers' Alliance. This is only another way of saying that the mass of the democratic voters is made up of farmers. Not only these farmers, but a majority of the den are not farmers are for the free coinage of for this, for The Courier-Journal, until a few months ago, has insisted that the free few months silver is the one essential of financial reform. In any prophecy that modestakes to outline future political events, the desires and intentions of the democratic voters, with respect to free silver, are not to be left out of account.

Still in the Dark.

The Charleston News and Courier is still in the dark. It cannot see how THE CON-STITUTION could consistently denounce the political course of President Harrison and hen welcome him when he came to Atlanta, pearing the congratulations and good wishes of the northern half of the union.

It is the impression among our people that when the president of the United States is our guest he should be shown a proper degree of respect.

What did The News and Courier expect? Did it expect us to mob our visitor?

The Marketing of the Melon Crop. From all accounts the watermelon croy will be by far the largest ever shipped. It is reported that the acreage planted is nearly double that of last year, and, so far, there is no indication that the yield per acre will be short. Good prices were realized last year, and those who planted then are planting more largely now; new growers have come in, and, altogether, there has been a tremendous increase in the acreage. With a crop so much larger than any peretofore raised, extraordinary care will have to be taken to ship the melons, so that they will be distributed widely and no market will be glutted. This is a difficult thing to do, but unless it is done a large part of the crop will be sacrificed.

This problem absolutely demands solution. The amount staked upon it in Georgia and South Carolina is hardly short of $1,000,000. The difference between the returns from bad distribution and good distribution will amount to that. What steps the melon growers will take we do not know. Last year the distribution of the crop was better than usual, largely on account of the efforts and organization of the Georgia and South Carolina melon exchange; but this was done at such great hazard to the public-spirited men who undertook the work, that they will hardly shoulder so heavy a load again. The matter will come up for consideration at the approaching meeting of the Melon Growers' Association.

In the meantime, THE CONSTITUTION will bend its energies to the solution of the problem. Some experiments made two years ago lead us to believe that the difficulties of distributing the melon crop may be largely overcome by showing all shippers every day how many cars were shipped to each market on the day previous. With this information, each shipper will know, by looking at his file for six days back, just how many melons will be delivered in any city within the six days next ensuing; and, knowing the size of the city, he can tell whether it will take any more melons within that time. We believe this will solve the question of distribution. It will keep everybody from sending melons to the same city at the same time.

Of course, to be worth anything, this information must cover the whole melon territory, and the shipments from all stations must be reported and consolidated daily. This will be a difficult task, but with the hearty co-operation of the railroads it can be done: and, with their help. THE CON-STITUTION proposes to undertake it.

Poor Joe Mulhattan, the commercial traveler, whose marvelous yarns are famous all over the country, was picked up in a demented condition in Chicago the other day. The Louisville Courier-Journal says: "The famous liar is a native of Pittsburg, and he once began his newspaper romancing there. He did not the total course of the cour like to give up his hoaxes, however, and only a few months ago succeeded in imposing a remarkable story upon The Boston Herald. He tried a similar "take" upon The New York Herald soon afterward, but that journal wrote here to investigate the remarkable scientific discovery he had told of, and escaped the trap. LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

GUYTON, Ga., April 7, 1891.—Editor Constitution—Gentlemen: The object of this letter is to ask you to correct the injustice done me by your special correspondent from Sylvania, in your issue of March 23d. He says the "religious row," as he terms it, had its origin in the resignation of Elder Scarboro as pastor of New Providence church. In this he is mistaken. Elder Scarboro's resignation was the result of the "row." It had resignation was the result of the "row." It had its origin nearly two years ago and may last two years more. I will not, however, tax your columns with a history of the case. Suffice it to say that at the proper time it will appear in pamblet form. Neither will I condescend to imitate Elder Scarboro's style of writing. If he ejoys it he shall certainly have all the pleasure to be derived from it.

he shall certainly have all the pleasure to be derived from it.

In reply to his statement that he "had sent a letter to The Telephone containing the proof by reliable witnesses" that I was a "falsifier," and the editor refused to print it, I have this to say: If it be true, I have more cause to regret it than any one else. I am not afraid, however, to meet the issue, and have written The Telephone to give him all the space necessary and publish all the evidence he has at his command. If I cannot stand upon my past record, then let me fall.

I furthermore assert that I have never slandered Elder Scarboro, either with my pen or tongue. What I have said or written is true. Very respectfully.

spectators today were Governor Northen, General Phil Cook, Hon. M. P. Reese, Colonel John P. Shannon, and others.

Mr. Wright's Argument Mr. Wright began his argument by stating that, on December 27, 1870, the state of Georgia leased the Western and Atlantic road to Joseph E. Brown and his associates for the term of twenty years at $5,000 per month.

The covenants on the part of the lessess con-and his associates for the term of twenty years at $25,000 per month.

The covenants on the part of the lessees contained in the contract and bond were two, and hely two, as follows: 1. "To make prompt payment into the treasury the state * * $25,000 at the end of each month until the expiration, termination or forfeiture of said lease." It "To return the road and its appurtenances in as good condition as it was when received by said company from the state under the lease."

Asto the first condition of the bond, that of the ayment of the rent, no question arise, it having been paid promptly every month during the lease, amounting to the sum of $6,000,000. But there was on the part of the lessees a second and the only remaining obligation in the bond, which was "to return the road and its appurtenances in as good condition as it was in when received by said company from the state under the lease."

The question would naturally arise of course.

The question would naturally arise of course,
What was that condition? For that condition, rhatever it might be, would be the absolute measure of the lessees' obligation (No. 2) under the whatever it might be, would be the absolute measure of the leasees' obligation (No. 2) under the bond.

Wisely, therefore, the state did not choose to leave that condition to be guessed at. So the state, by the lease act itself, provided the means for ascertaining the condition of the road and its appurtenances at that time. It provided as follows: "That the governor shall appoint three railroad men of experience, who shall examine the road and its appurtenances carefully, and shall make out in writing a schedule or inventory of the same, carefully describing and setting forth the true condition of the road and its rolling stock and appurtenances * * * which shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state and filed in the executive office, etc." * * *

This was done, and the report of the said commission was made on January 10, 1871.

Mr. Wright then went on to show that two things were definitely settled by written contract between the landlord and tenant in the very beginning. First, that the property to be returned to the state at the end of the lease was to be the same condition, as that delivered by the state to the lessees; 2. That that condition was to be evidenced by the inventory or inventories made and filed in the secretary of state's office contemporaneously for nearly so) with the delivery of the roperty to the lessees.

He then proceeded to state in general terms what that condition was; to-writ: The condition of the road in 1870, when the lessees received it, showing from the report of the commission appointed under the lease act that it was in a wretched condition, Speaking generally, he said its track, constructed originally mainly of old confederate re-rolled iron, was as to three-fourths of its entire length absolutely and literally worn out, fit only to be sold in the market as the lowest read of "escrapion," and the best rails of the re-its entire length absolutely and literally worn out, fit only to be sold in the market as the lowest grade of "scrap iron," and the best rails of the remaining portion of the road having not exceeding three years of service life in them.

There was no ballast. All the bridges with two or three minor exceptions were bad; and those spanning the principal streams were in the last stages of dilapidation, and had been condemned as unsafe and as requiring immediate replacement by new structures; its buildings and other structures along the line were inadequate; its locomotive engines, rolling stock and other equipment were of the lightest weight, inferior in quality, generally worn out, ond wholly insufficient for the business of the road.

were of the lightest weight, inferior in quality, generally worn out, ond wholly insufficient for the business of the road.

Now, a few words as to what followed. Finding that with such a road and such equipments they could not successfully, or even at all, carry on the business for which they leased the property, the lessees determined to erect for their own use, during their tenancy, the necessary houses, bridges and other structures; to lay down, from terminus to terminus of the road, a superior quality of Ressemer steel rails; to ballast the road the entire length, and to equip it with the largest and most approved and most expensive locomotive engines and cars—in short, to prepare themselves to handle the business which they proposed to create and maintain for their own profit during their twenty years' possession.

He showed the lessees paid for this property over $1,000,000 of their own money, and placed it for their own use in their own business. He then proceeded to state that as the lease drew to a close a difference arose between the landlard and tenants. The tenants or lessees claimed that they had the right to remove all additions and fixtures they had placed upon the road, provided they should leave or return the property to the state in the same condition. The state, on the contrary, held that all additions, improvements and betterments placed on the road by the lenants belonged to the state as the owner of the soil. sate in the same condition. The state, on the contrary, held that all additions, improvements and betterments placed on the road by the tenants belonged to the state as the owner of the soil. This is the great issue, the one that was fought over in the legislature, the one that was fought over in the legislature, the one the commission was created to consider and pass upon, the one which is now the bone of contention between the counsel for the state and the counsel for the lessees.

In speaking of the contest in the legislature and its failure to adjudicate this matter, he went on lossy at this juncture "wisdom, justice and modration" prevailed, and this honorable commission—this orderly impartial hearing, this patient, intelligent investigation and search after the truth and justice and right of the matter—happily succeeded to the unsatisfactory and unprofitable wrangling that attended the earlier stages of this controversy. The state came at last to recognize that "might was not right," that force in this day and time is not law, that its sheriff and isnlitia are not either the most favored or the most appropriate agents for the arbitrament of legislirght—that not even the legislature its affurns led a forum the most to be desired to pass dispass ibunately and intelligently upon the delicate and difficult questions of law, of fact and business per sented by the case in hand.

Is it not: pardonable diversion from the argument itself to observe here that it will ever remain a crowning credit and honor to the commonwealth, and a lasting memorial to the present chief magistrate of the state who actively favored this course of moderation and justice, and to the wisdem, parriotism and statesmanship of those legislators who pressed the measure to final trunch, that the great state of Georgia, in preference to making the limit of the militia its priests of justice, those legislators of Georgia recognized as men eminante their integrity and ability, who shall commission with power and authority to be determine the claims * ac-

THE DIVINE MYSTERY.

A Young Man Who Says God Has Spoke

A young man giving his name as C. E. Love is confined in the station house.

He is insane. Religion seems to be the cause of his derangement. He says God has revealed the divine mystery to him, and his imprisonment is the result of a conspiracy to prevent him from telling to the world what has been revealed to him by God.

Yesterday morning about 2 o'clock Love appeared at the station house. He acted in a very strange manner, talking unintelligibly about a conspiracy, and stating that he wanted to take out a warrant against someone for breach of promise.

After running on in a rambling way for a ew minutes, observing that perhaps the officers thought him crazy, he left the station as cers thought him crazy, he left the station as abruptly as he came.

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, just as the evening watch was going on duty, he came back again. His actions were so decidely strange that Captain Couch ordered him locked up.
Where Love is from is not known. Indeed, it is not positively known that Love is his name. He is of a fair complexion with blue eyes and light hair, about twenty-five years old and five feet eight or nine inches in height.

A chair was put in his cell, but in a moment he smashed it to splinters. He told an officer that he had to have relief in some way, and breaking the chair was the only way he could get it.

Love says that God has revealed the divine mystedy to him by the telegraph and electricity. What this mystery is he only attempts to convey by several incomprehensible signs with his hands.

He says perpetual motion is the five senses, and that he thinks of man, heaven and hell—three things at once—with three senses, and has two senses left to do nothing.

The man in the next cell to Love was raving.

The man in the next cell to Love was raving drunk. Love said he had been commissioned with divine power—which was breath—and could quiet the man. He waved his hand several times to demonstrate his power, but failed.

Issued.

Love is well dressed in a suit of light clothes, and when he first came to the station house had on a pair of spectacles.

An effort will be made today to find his friends, if he has any in Atlanta.

few hours of Herschell H. Fudge, a young man who for several years occupied a prominent position in social and business circles in this city. Some time ago Fudge came to this city after an absence of two years, representing himself as the agent of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company. He solicited business, and secured an application from Mr. A. J. Lippitt for a $2,000 policy, Mr. Lippitt giving his note for $60 for the premium due on the policy. It subsequently transpired that Fudge had been dismissed from the service of the company before his return to the city. After securing Mr. Lippitt's application and note, he failed to send either to the company, but hypothecated the note to another person at a liberal discount, and then left the city. The transaction came to the attention of the present grand jury, which found a true bill against him, charging larceny after trust. Fudge has a young wife, who has the sympathy of all in his unfortunate predicament.

"It is a false idea that parents would consider it hard to pay a fine for their boys. They would gladly pay to find out that their boys are smoking the vile things, so they might correct it before too late. Make the habit odious for the boys of the future. If a boy knows he will be arrested if caught smoking them, he will leave cigarettes severely alone. I am in favor of making the tax so high that cigarettes will not be sold in Atlanta. And I want a state law enacted which will exclude them from Georgia. Let the Empire State of the South lead the van in this great reform."

The Forsyth Street Bridge.

The Forsyth Street Bridge.

Mr. Turner's talk in The Constitution yesterday about the Forsyth street bridge struck a responsive cord all over the city.

The councilman made a happy hit.

"I am glad to see," said a prominent citizen yesterday, speaking of Mr. Turner's talk, "that Atlanta is going to abandon the old, cheap, make-shift way of doing such work, and is preparing to erect a bridge permanent and beautiful in its material and finish—a bridge where the old chestnut of a $5 fine for driving faster than a walk will be obsolete, where instead a magnificent roadway will be a part of a solid roadway will be a part of a solid street, where the fastest driving and heavies

With the bridge, property on Forsyth between Alabams and Marietta will develop at once into first-class central property. Where one person passes the door of one of these stores now, perhaps twenty-five will pass when this chasm, which now so effectually cuts the street in two, shall be bridged. Already property has advanced nearly 50 per cent in anticipation of the improveper cent in anticipation of the improve-ment. I understand an offer of $5,000 a year for twenty years for the right to use the street car tracks of the bridge can be easily obtained. This is 6 per cent on its cost and makes the in-vestment a first-class one for the city."

The Sewer Pipes.

The sewer committee, Mr. Hendrix, chairman, Mr. King and Mr. Shropshire met yesterday afternoon.

The contract for sewer pipes for the year 1891 was awarded.

At the last meeting of the general council bids for sewer pipes were opened from a dozen manufacturers. All the papers were referred to the sewer committee with power to act. With the committee were the mayor, the city engineer, the city attorney with power to act. With the committee were the mayor, the city engineer, the city attorney and commissioner of public works. The bids were thoroughly canvassed by those present, and the contract was awarded to Sciple Bros., of Atlanta. The city will save by the con-tract just made about 30 per cent when com-pared with the prices of last year.

ALABAMA MOB.

Which Crosses the State Line, and Entering Clay County, Go to Their Victim's Home, Where the Murder Takes Place

FORT GAINES, Ga., April 22 .- [Special.]-On his own premises, five miles above Fort Gaines, about sunset yesterday evening, Mr. Joel M. Holmes was brutally murdered, and his friend, Will Alexander, in attempting to save him received five pistol shots, but was not fatally injured.

THE CAUSE OF THE QUARREL. It appears that Mr. Holmes stood on the bond of George Davis, a freedman, for some misdemeanor, on condition that Davis would remain on his plantation until the case was settled, and that John Whidden, of Henry county, Ala., claimed that Davis owed him. and sent a wagon for him yesterday to go to his farm and work out the indebtedness.

Holmes refused to send the freedman unless released from his bond. In the afternoon Whidden, with three of his associates, Napier, Osborne and Norris, all young men, armed themselves with pistols and went up to . On reaching the Holmes's plantation in which Davis resided they covered all the en with their pistols, and forbid any one to leave the yard or call Holmes.

GOES TO HIS DEATH Hearing a disturbance, J. M. Holmes and his brother went over to the cabin in their shirt sleeves, unarmed, when Whidden and his crowd began abusing them, and challenged them for a fight. J. M. Holmes replied that he was unarmed and did not want a difficulty. Whidden continued his abuse until Holmes slapped him, when Whidden struck him in face with his pistol, knocking him backward, and then fired his pistol, the ball striking him on the side of the head, inflicting a flesh wound, and burning his face badly with powder. Holmes's brother caught him in the act of falling, and while in his arms, Napier ran up from behind and shot two balls in his head, killing him instantly.

ANOTHER VICTIM During the altercation Will Alexander and Robert Burnet came up in a buggy, and when the fight began Alexander started to rescue Holmes, but Osborne began shooting him. on the ground he put four balls through his flesh and clothing, but did not seriously wound him. The verdict of the jury of inquest was that all four were guilty of conspiracy to mob Holmes, and that Napier is guilty of murder, and Whidden, Norris and rne accessories. Whidden and Norris are under arrest. Napier and Osborne escaped.

THE BALL TAKEN OUT.

The doctors who were called to see him took the bullet out. It was ragged, like it had passed through bone. The doctors say Disharoon will get well, though he had just gotten over a severe attack of fever, and was still walking on crutches. He is entirely innocent of reporting, having always sided with the blockaders.

Taylor is a bad man. He has been in the chaingang from Dawson county for shooting a man. After serving his time he went west, and after being gone several years come back with $2,000 or $3,000 and purchased a farm near this place. It is supposed the money was the fruits of sundry robberies. His mother is an old tough. She carries a pistol, and is always ready to use it.

HE WILL SHOOT TILL HE DIES.

Taylor will be a bad man to arrest, He says he will shoot until he dies before he will surrender. Sheriff Kitchen started on his trail, and will probably bring him, as he was never known to fail.

In Which Guns, Knives and Clubs Were Used With Telling Effect.

EUFAULA. Ala., April 22.—[Special.]—
Poston's mill was the scene of a bloody affray recently, which was not without some humorous features. Dan Butler, colored, says that Ike Ray, also colored, was chasing Martha Ray, Ike's wife, with a knife, and to escape Ike, Martha ran to Dan for protection. Ike then sailed into Dan and brused him up considerably, while Martha escaped. Dan went to the home of Jerry Ford, close by, and grabbing an old gun, started in to do some execution with it, not knowing whether it was loaded; he did not attempt to shoot, he said, but Ike, who had pursued him, hit the gun with a stick and it went off, scattering its contents of small bird shot among two or three colored women, making a pepper box of the nose of one of them. Dan then, one of his arms having been disabled, opened his knife with his teeth and raked Ike across the breast, and was about to carve him again when a friend of Ike's hit him on his good arm with a maul or an old anvil or something and disabled it—the arm—and Dan was left quite helpless. During the fracas somebody provided Ike with an eightfoot pole, and with this he performed on the head of Dan and made sundry gashes thereon. From Dan's account it appears that the whole neighborhood jumped on and walked all over him. He came to town yesterday with such fragments of himself as he could get together and took out some warrants. EUFAULA. Ala., April 22.-[Special.]-

Refuses to Live with Him.

Athens, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—The case of Mr. A. L. Thompson, of Greenville, S. C., is in some respects pitful. Thompson is the man who married a maid of Athens. She left him, because her mother told her to come home, whereupon Mr. Thompson instituted legal proceedings. The case was decided in favor of the wife. He seems to love the woman to distraction. He is now at Madison, and it is feared that he is losing his mind. In a letter to The Athens Banner Thompson says: "My best wishes to my wife, and only hope that she will consider and make friends with me, for my trouble is so great that I cannot stand it, for I love her better than my own life, and I am willing to come to Athens and live. Put her in a house, with all the necessaries of life; take her two sisters with us to live. Send them to school and make ladies of them, for I am willing to make any sacrifice of pleasure to gain her back to me, and give her father regular employment."

There is some symphathy for Thompson, as he is undoubtedly devoted to his wife, and can-not tear himself away from her.

Are Making it Hot for Hood.

ALPHARETTA, Ga., April 22.—[Special.]—Various rumors are still afloat in regard to the alleged poisoning of Mrs. Hood by her husband, Corbin Hood. The poisoning occurred about a month ago, and as the matter has been kept very quiet, it is difficult to obtain the facts in the case. It is in evidence, however, that Hood purchased a box of rat poison at a store, asked if it would "kill folks," went home with it, and the next day reported that his wife was ill. It is said that, being advised to send for a physician, Hood refused. Mrs. Hood recovered, went to her father, and Hood sought refuge with his father, and so the matter stands. But the gossips are not done with it, and the courts may investigate it.

It is said that before Mrs. Hood was poisoned her husband asked certain parties "if the doctors could tell when a person died from poison," Hood is seventeen or eighteen years old, his wife is quite young, and they have been married only a few months.

Mr. John H. Seals, editor of The Sunny South, has issued invitations to the press of Georgia to banquet with The Sunny South.

The banquet will take place May 1st.
The invitations announced that with the month of May The Sunny South enters upon its eighteenth volume and is now an eighty-four column paper. It has, says the invitation, had an eventful life and a long and severe struggle, but having triumphed over all obstacles it now sends out for its brethren to come and rejoice with it. The invitation says:

"This is not simply complimentary. You will be expected, and we hope to have every journal in the state represented. Come for a good time, and present your card at the door, naming the paper you represent."

The banquet will take place at the home of The Sunny South, 208 Houston street, at 8 o'clock p. m.

The Last Minstrels.

The following extract from The New York Herald puts very high the Gorman minstrels, and if this notice is not partial, we may say that they will be the dessert and cream of the season. The ramons paper said:

White Sulphur Springs.—Mr. P. M. Fry, representing White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., is stopping at the Kimball house. He says the coming season for the "White" will doubtless be the greatest in its listory. More inquries are being received and rooms engaged than ever before.

Mr. B. F. Easkle, who has so successfully conducted it in the past, will still have charge of it. "I wish you would say for us," said Mr. Fry, "that the rumor being circulated that the White Sulphur Springs will not be opened this summer, is all a mistake. They will be opened and conducted in that magnificent style that has so characterized it in the past and made it one of the greatest watering places in America."

The opening of the truck business has developed the strong competition between the Savannah Steamship Company and the Atantic Coast Line.

The freight paid out for the transportaof the Florida orange crop amounts to $1,000,-000 a year, and the Central railroad's steamship line last winter made a heavy bid for this business, and got a big part of it. The steamship company put a heated storeroom on one of its wharves for the reception of oranges and perishable goods, and put the rate on oranges from Jacksonville to New York down from 53

The Atlantic Coast Dispatch, which includes the Pennsylvania railroad, has met this by establishing a heated warehouse at the Penn-sylvania railroad's terminus in New York. The time has been shortened by building cutoffs, which obviate the necessity of running into cities along the way. At Richmond a short cut leaves the Petersburg railroad five miles below the city, and strikes the main line seven miles above. It is said that $400,000 have been spent in improvements of this charter. Early in the season a 30 per cent advance in rates was made by the Atlantic Coast Dispatch at the instance of the Penn-sylvania rallroad over the remonstrance of southern connections. Later that roa was induced to send a representative south to look into the business, and the shippers made a strong case. The result was that the old rates on fruit and vegetables were restored the

The excursion season has begun in earnes and the railroad men have their hands full of applications for special rates for various meet-ngs.

The following are the principal meetings of organized bodies:

The Georgia Teachers' Association will meet in Brunswick April 28th to May 1st, and a rate of one fare for the round trip has been made by the passenger association.

The Georgia cavalry regiment goes into camp Monday, April 27th, at Savannah. This is the first encampment under the new law, and the meeting of a regiment of hussars in Savannah will be a great occasion. The association has given the state a rate of 1 cent per mile for twenty-five or more men traveling in uniform on one ticket. in uniform on one ticket.

Mr. Kight, the assistant general passenger agent of the East Tennessee railroad, has applied for a special rate from Atlanta to Brunswick on account of the Moreland Park cadets. The rate will be $5 on May 1st.

The Southern Travelers' Association will meet at Augusta on May 6th. As usual, the commercial men claim the earth and hold it. They have asked for a rate of 1 cent a mile each way. Considering the amount of business.

The largest meeting considered by the The largest meeting considered by the Southern Passenger Association, is the southern Baptist convention, which meets at Birmingham on May 8th. Commissioner Slaughter has announced the rate for that body as a fare and a third for the round trip. Since it has developed that all of the important roads outside of the association give a rate of one fare for the round trip, there is a movement among the association roads to reconsider and fix the rate at one fare. Colonel Slaughter said yesterday that the matter was yet under consideration, and he could not say definitely, but he thought the one-fare rate would be adopted. This intelligence will be very gratifying to the delegates.

The Red Men's grand annual encampment will begin at Savannah May 12th. A rate of 4 cents a mile for the round trip has been made by the Passenger Association for that occasion

The grand annual meeting of the Independent Order of B'nai Brith will bring a great many distinguished Israelites to Atlanta on May 10th and 11th. The Hebrew Orphan asylum of this city is the pride of this order, and Atlanta is the fittest meeting place. A rate of 4 cents a mile for the round trip has been fixed.

The Centennial at Columbia, S. C., beginning May 13th, is the next important meeting. It is held in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the capital at Columbia and the occasion will be a great one. General Wade Hampton will be the orator of the day, and the occasion is one to inspire a great speech. The Southern Passenger Association has made rates of one fare for the round trip.

That sad-faced crowd, the Georgia Funeral Directors' Association, will meet in Bruns-wick on the 26th and 27th of May. The rate is 4 cents a mile the round trip.

The Scotch-Irish congress of the United States and Canada will meet at Louisville on the 16th to 17th of May, and delegates will go from Georgia and most southern states. The rate fixed is 4 cents a mile for the round

The Knights of Pythias will hold their annual meeting in Brunswick, beginning May 18th. A rate of 4 cents for the round trip has been fixed.

Birmingham May 21st to June 1st. The rate fixed is 4 cents a mile the round trip.

The railroads are not accustomed to dealing with theological questions, but if they grant the one-fare rate to the southern Baptist convention they will no doubt be asked by the Presbyterians why they should not have the same terms. The only way the railroads could escape a theological discussion would be to shy off into mathematics and begin to count noses with the Presbyterians.

For nearly three weeks the meetings have been held. During that time the interest taken has surpassed the expectations of the ministers concerned in it, every afternoon and night the church being crowded with worshipers. The successful results brought about have enthused the association, and it leaves Atlanta highly gratified.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock

NEW YORK, April 22.—The opening in the stock market was fairly steady, but continuance of realizations frove Chicago gas down % per cent, but offerings were quickly absorbed and after the first half hour compartive quiet reigned in the market, and early losses ere not only recovered in full, but fractional advances were not only recovered in full, but fractional advances were secred all along the line. Fluctuations, except in stocks mentioned, were confined within narrow limits, however, and the general list was barren of that feature throughout the day. The afternoon brought a drooping tendency again, still under the pressure of short sales, but the oversold condition of the market became apparent in the last hour, when there was a rush to buy for both sides of the account and prices were sent up more rapidly than at any previous time of the day. Industrials took the lead in this rise, however, and cotton oil stocks unaccountably advanced very sharply. Goulds were leaders in the this rise, however, and cotton oil stocks unaccountably advanced very sharply. Goulds were leaders in the general list, though the upward movement reached every portion of the list. The close was, therefore, active and strong, at the highest prices of the day. The application of the Cotton Oil Company to have its securities placed upon the regular list of the stock exchange furnished the only motive for buying, as far as can be seen. Advances were material in a few shares, but the general list was up only fractional amounts at the close. Sales listéd, 252,009; unlisted, 25,000.

Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular.

NEWYORK, April 22—[Special.1—Liverpool sent but an apathetic response this morning to the improvement here yesterday. Opening cables from there reported an advance of barely 1-32d, and this market in consequence opened at a decline of from 263 points from last night. The presence of a large number of buying orders soon, however, made itself apparent, and an improvement set in which gathered force as it progressed, and finally resulted in advancing August to 8.90, when it became known that Liverpool had further improved, closing firm at a net gain from yesterday of 364 points. The trade here has been upon a liberal scale, and it is evident that public sentiment has been attracted to cotton as a result of the publicity yesterday—given to the fact that prices here touched the lowest recorded figure for August delivery, not only since the existence of the exchange, but since 1858. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Provisions. CHICAGO, April 22. The excitement in the wheat CHICAGO, April 22.—The excitement in the wheat pit on the board of trade was continued today. As on yesterday, the bears had the best of it, and they improved their opportunities by forcing a further reduction in values. There were occasional rallies, but the general tendency was downward, and the net result of the day's trading was a reduction of 2%c in values. Other articles dealt in were in sympathy with the weakness in wheat and show a material loss in prices. At the oppning bell, the bears swarmed into the wheat pit, appurently resolved to recount themselves for the pit, apparently resolved to recoup themselves for the losses which they sustained during the recent advance. They played a bold game, and their one laught was irresistible. The New York contingent, which led the recent advance, was selling out its wheat, and most of the local bulls followed their lead, though they were recent advance, was selling out its wheat, and most of the local buils followed their lead, though they were inclined to buy on brokes by which they were losers, as the breaks came in too-rapid succession. The bear contingent seemed to call the market successfully at all times, and got the benefit of all the action that was in it. They put out their wheat on hard spots, took it back on breaks, and again flooded the market when it railied. The bulls, who had hoped for the price to take a decided turn higher, were in this way drowned out several times. Some of this class were working successfully on the short side. They carried the day at the start in spite of the fact that the opening English cables were steady and firm and London quoted cargoes higher. Later cables were all lower, with Liverpool showing a half-penny decline. Lendon was quoted easier, and Paris 80690 centimes lower for flour and 55 centimes lower for wheat for luture delivery, the latter equal to about 4 ac per bushel decline. Domestic news was mostly bullish. July wheat started at 11062, sold off to 108%, recovered to 110½, and then broke to 1085; After railying to 1094, it again eased broke to 108%. After rallying to 109%, it again eased broke to 108%, After rallying to 109%, it again eased off to 108%, closing weak at 108%, %. May opened at 112% % and sold off to 110, closing 14% higher. Corn was as weak as wheat. Orders to sell came from shipper's and outside speculators, as well as from the local bears. The latter covered some of their short sales on the breaks. July started at 66%66%, rallying to 67c, broke again to 66c and ranged around 664%68% thereafter. Fine weather greatly increased the bearish sentiment.

Oats followed corn closely, and was very dull throughout most of the session, except for the weakness which culminated in a break of 11%c.

ness which culminated in a break of 14c. ness which culminated in a break of 1/4c.

Provisions opened weak in sympathy with the grains and because hogs were lower on account of heavier receipts than were expected. There was a slightly stronger feeling as the session advanced, July pork started at $13.00, cased to $12.80 and recovered to $12.87%.

Ribs were weaker relatively than pork at the start, welcome, in a speech that elicited the warmest applause.

Commander Stockdell, in his usual happy and pleasant manner, seconded the welcome in behalf of Cœur de Lion commandery, and perhaps his inimitable style of oratory never shone to better advantage than in this address, which captured the house.

General Gobin's address, delivered within the precincts of the asylum, was most interesting and listened to with profound attention and enjoyment by those who were so fortunate as to hear it. He spoke of the growth and prosperity of the order all over the world, and expressed his gratification at finding the order so flourishing and prosperous in Georgia's capital. Hon. J. T. Glenn, exmayor of Atlanta, delivered one of those pointed and telling addresses of welcome, for which he is noted, in behalf of Knights Templar generally. His speech was pithy and very highly enjoyed.

Next were Grand Recorder G. C. Connor, of Tennessee. who made a stirring speech, For $16,000 Damages.—Mrs. B. D. Garrett has filed a suit for $10,000 against the Richmond and Danville, on account of the death of her husband, who was killed while crossing the track, near the exposition grounds, October last.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass. Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably precible Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

The worst forms of Catarrh disappear with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties effect a perfect and permanent cure, no matter how bad the case, or of how long standing. BROWN & WATSON,

IS TAYLOR GUILTY?

THE JURY WILL DECIDE THE FATE OF THE ACCUSED TODAY.

The Man on Trial Charged with Having Stabbed Miss McClure While Going Home from Her Work.

Charles Taylor is on trial in the criminal ranch of the superior court, charged with a very serious offense.

Some time ago Miss M. A. McClure was returning from her place of employment to her home near the Hebrew Orphans' Home, late inflicting a serious wound.

Suddenly she was confronted with a burly negro, who slashed at her throat with a knifc, inflicting a serious wound.

Her screams brought several persons to her assistance. She was bleeding profusely, and the negro who committed the dastardly deed walked coolly away, menacing an old gentleman, who appeared on the scene, and threatening to kill kim if he approached.

Those present had a good look at the negro, after he had walked up the street a short distance, because of the fact that he stopped under the electric light and looked back before he finally disappeared.

The brutal assailant of the lady wore a long coat and had a scattering beard. Several negroes were found who answered that description, and at last Charles Taylor was arrested and placed in jail.

The Trial Begins.

The Trial Begins.

Yesterday morning the case came up before Judgo Richard H. Clark, solicitor C. D. Hill as prosecutor, and Mr. R. E. Sibley, Mr. Frank G. Walker and George A. Carter for the defense.

The jury was made up of C. H. Bankston,
A. W. Crookshauks, J. A. Langford, J. E.
Gullatt, J. M. Goldsmith, John Ball, B. S.
Ivey, T. R. Ashworth, J. D. Barry, J. J.

He is an ordinary-looking negro, black as ink, with a scraggy fringe of beard, and a wooly head. He was shabbily dressed, but throughout the trial appeared perfectly composed and self-possessed.

Miss McClure's Statement.

Miss McClure, the lady who was so cruelly assaulted, exhibited the sear on her throat near where, were she a man, the "Adam's apple" would be.
When asked if she could identify the prisoner as her assailant she answered that he looked very much like the man.
"If he had on that long coat," she said, "he would be the man."
On the cross-examination she was asked the question again as to his identity.

question again as to his identity.
"Yes, I believe he is the man." "Why do you believe he is the man who assaulted you?"

"Well, he looks mean enough to do any-The state closed, after having introduced a lot of evidence, all of a more or less indefinite

The defense then introduced a number of witnesses, some to prove an alibi; others to prove good character; and that, like the state's estimony, was very much confused.

Mr. Milton Culver swore positively that the negro had been working regularly for him, prior to the arrest, and that he was always peaceful and well behaved.

The long-tailed, rusty black cost found in his possession was introduced, and was a leading feature in the case.

The defense closed during the afternoon, and after a very strong opening speech for the prosecution by Mr. Hill, court adjourned until

If Taylor is proven guilty of the heinous crime, he will receive the extreme extent of the law; but the jury must pass upon the case before his guilt or innocence is established.

Our American chemists are renowned, not only for their enterprise, but for their vigilance. They are prompt to expose frauds wherever they find them. Thus far, however, they have not earned the reward of one thousand (1,000) dollars offered by the proprietors of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for the discovery, by analysis, of a particle of mercury, iodide of potash, or any poisonous substance, in their famous medicine. The reason the feward has not been picked up is because there are no mineral or poisonous substances in Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). It is a vegetable compound, which has been before the public for half a century, and its history is marked by a wonderful series of successes.

COPENHIL Auction Sale,

Tuesday, April 28th, BEGINNING

AT 30'CLOCK P.M.

Here is an opportunity to buy a choice residence lot for a great deal less money than you will spet them in the future. The demand for this kind of real estate grows daily. The location, just cast of the city limits, overlooks all of the surrounding hills and low grounds. The electric car's run through this property every few minutes, giving prompt and rapid transit through the entire city. The water is pure, cold freestone; the neighborhood the equal of any in the south; Senator Colquitt, Colomel T. E. Walker, Judge Palmer, et al., live in the immediate neighborhood. Go out and examine the lots, see the beautiful drives and weigh the advantages, and you will conclude that right now is the time to buy. No investment has ever paid as handsome profits, as good real estate, and no person has bought a piece of first-class property in or near Atlanta, since it was Marthasville, and failed to realize big returns from its sale.

wille, and failed to realize big returns from its sale.

Home hunters now appreciate the fact that the business of Atlanta is increasing so rapidly that the noise and bustle near the center of the city create a great desire for lots on the hill tops that are just outside of the city. This is true around New York, Chicago and all the great cities.

Copenhill then is the very place to supply this demand. Then look abend and buy while these lots are cheap, for, if you delay, you must pay more money. If you are not ready to build, secure your lot at this sale, for nothing will pay you such interest.
